the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995. The public sector has become an important employer of people with mental health problems.

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the mental health of people in the public sector. The Department of Health (1996) has published a strategy for mental health care, which includes a commitment to improve the mental health of people in the public sector. The strategy states that 'the mental health of people in the public sector should be a priority for all public sector employers'.

The Department of Health (1996) also states that 'the mental health of people in the public sector should be a priority for all public sector employers'. This means that all public sector employers should have a policy on mental health, and should ensure that their employees are protected from mental health problems. The Department of Health (1996) also states that 'the mental health of people in the public sector should be a priority for all public sector employers'.
